Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2011/02/22: CIA-RDP90-01208R000100040018-0

BOSTON HERALD (MA) 24 October 1984

Tufts wimps out with its CIA ban

Tufts to ban recruitment by the Central Intelligence Agency on its campus is deplorable. Two weeks ago, student demonstrators formed a human chain, preventing recruiters from meeting with undergraduates. At a recent disciplinary hearing, the administration decided not to punish the young thugs, thus encouraging the rule by force.

Even more outrageous was their decision to bow to the demands of the protestors and put a temporary ban on CIA recruitment.

Should Tufts extend their ban, as proposed, they will be making an important political statement; that America really doesn't need an intelligence service. It's one thing to criticize the CIA's past or tion vulnerable to both co-present operations, and vert aggression and terrorquite another to declare ist blackmail.

them persona non grata. With the Soviet Union and its allies making significant inroads in Central America, Southeast Asia and the Middle East, this is a dangerously naive position. A well-run intelligence network is also our first line of defense against the kind of international terrorism that has plagued U.S. missions around the world.

STAT

The U.S.S.R. has the most extensive, well-funded, intelligence-gathering network in the world. Its agents have achieved notable successes stealing our technology and subverting pro-Western gov-

By acquiescing to attacks on the CIA, Tufts is playing into the hands of those who would prefer to see our na-